Doubtless realizing that the interest of the great crowd centered in what he had to say regarding the announcement of Mr. Roosevelt, the speaker proceeded at once to that subject, his reference to the "third term candidacy," as he declared it to be, being as previously indicated. Proceeding further into the subject Mr. Bryan said:

"Three years ago last fall Mr. Taft was just the man; in fact, he was two men all in one. In the west he was lauded as the man who would whoop 'emup, and in the east as the man who would put 'em to sleep; a radical in the west, a conservative in the east. Stone to Speak Today.

Senator Stone gave notice that he would speak temorrow on his resolution would speak tomorrow on his resolution and would press its consideration by the senate. He is understood to be acting in co-operation with the White house. President Taff is in constant touch with the situation through the war department and state department officials. The administration would not welcome an issue that might force it to send troops across the line, not only because of an indisposition to exercise such a power against a friendly nation, but also out of regard for the safety of Americans in Mexico, who it is feared might be objects of attack by those inflamed at what might appear to them to be an invasion.

The United States considers, however, that an unusual situation is involved.

that an unusual situation is involved. Forces have been landed in other countries to protect American lives and property when officers appeared unable to do so, in spite of the revolutionary factions, but not in defince of the protests of the titular government.

Would Not Be War.

The question in this case, which it is believed may arise at any moment at El Paso and along the border, is whether the dispatch of troops into Mexico merely to stop firing into American territory would constitute an act of war from the viewpoint of President Madero. American troops, it is said, simply would prevent firing and restore order, retiring when this had been accomplished.

There was talk today among government officials about the expediency of creating a neutral zone along the international line, but the difficulty is that while the Mexican government might so consent, the rebels, without head or organization, might not respect it.

Dispatches to the state department showed a serious state of sffairs at Thanalllo, state of Durango, and in the Laguna district. Robber bands have been devastating many large estates. Varying reports came from southern Mexico, giving no light as to whether the government or insurgent forces had the upper hand.

No outward indications of trouble at Mexico City were chronicled.
